The Economics Association of Sri Venkateswara College organized a session on 4th January on the topic “Overview of Indian Financial Markets and career opportunities” in collaboration with the Internal Quality Assurance Cell of SVC and NSE Academy. Vice President, Naman Kapoor first introduced The Economic Association which was followed by the teacher in-charge Dr Brahma Reddy welcoming the guest speaker. Mr Kunal Tyagi, manager at NSE, presently posted at Delhi regional office, holds a Master’s in Business Administration and has been working with NSE for the last nine years in the area of Business Development and Education department.

Being someone who’s been working with NSE for a long period of time and observing its growth himself, he conferred that the untouched financial market holds great growth potential in India, with NSE being one of the primary drivers. He proceeds to discuss how the NSE became a big exchange and adopted an electronic form of trading, undergoing drastic evolution. This development was in great contrast to the pre - 1990s scenario when 21 different stock exchanges were present and worked in an open-outcry trading structure. He then outlines the differences between the traditional stock exchange and modern stock exchange along the lines of liquidity, transparency, trading hours, etc. He comments how the FII movements have been under control due to the growing number of retail investors since the beginning of the pandemic. He then advances onto explaining three types of market - primary, secondary and OTC, where the former two are under NSE.

Mr. Kunal then proceeded to discuss the significance of the stock exchange, along with the goals of the National Stock Exchange. He mentioned the various asset classes of NSE and the group of companies associated with them and their roles. Regarding investing in the market, he discussed the essentials required to start a trading- Demat account, Trading account and the platforms provided by NSE to trade. He also mentioned different parameters to consider to minimise risk while investing. Furthermore, he talked about Nifty 50, the benchmark Indian stock market index of NSE and the functioning of Nifty trading halts. With this, he concluded the overview on the working of NSE and provided a glance into a venture of NSE called NSE Academy, which aims in developing financial skills through their various programs.

He went over the career opportunities, and the potential that the BFSI sector holds for fresh graduates and post graduates. They offer certifications at different levels on various aspects of financial markets, along with digital initiatives of NSE to understand and improve trading strategies through virtual simulation of the market. This was followed up with a Question-and-Answer session wherein he answered multiple career-related as well as academic queries. Additionally, he advised students to read headlines of business articles and keep up with the market through their own research. With this, the enlightening session, which provided insights to the working of financial markets and opportunities to learn more through online programs, came to an end.
