TIME	VENUE	NUMBER OF PARTICIPANTS	NATURE: Outdoor/Indoor
12 NOON	ROOM 210	21 STUDENTS PLUS PROFESSORS	INDOOR
SUPPORT/ ASSISTANCE:	ELA

BRIEF INFORMATION ABOUT THE ACTIVITY (CRITERION NO. -):

TOPIC/SUBJECT OF THE ACTIVITY	CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP
OBJECTIVES	To encourage students to tap their potential as writers. The underlying assumption of the workshop is that everyone can write creatively if taught certain techniques.
METHODOLOGY	The students are taught a view of the writing process, which calls on honing of certain skills. These skills include primarily a two-step writing process: creativity and critical thinking. Techniques like freewriting, loop writing, giving the writing a voice and ways to think imaginatively are taught to enhance the creative process.
OUTCOMES	At the end of the workshop students should feel like writers of poems, short stories and other little creative vignettes that can be used for a longer novel. Attached is a poem that was written collectively by students at the end of the workshop

This Pen My Weapon

Early morning workshop is like the cold breeze

The door shuts a minute after the bell strikes 8.45

The two ends of the door, meet where the sunlight starts to enter

Closed door waiting for the stranger's hand to open

They will double up with laughter like a portmanteau

The fans in the room are as misplaced as my thoughts during an 8.45 lecture
Running without any limitations on its speed
Be like the ceiling fan, heating itself up to provide coolness to people
The expanse of the white board calling itself the universe
Reflecting self-conscious eyes
The white board seems like my mind all blank filled with things that will again disappear like the words scribbled in free verse
Ray of light entering through windows reminding us to gather information
A glass on the teacher's table, lonely. There is no water in it
The chair looks so frail, yet bears a human's weight
So many people, so many strangers
Lost minds trying to find answers
The windows around me invites me to feel the breeze
Their patterns designed more beautifully than life
I wish the classroom could be ours
The sound of silence screams through the lone bench in a filled room, but no one really hears it other than I
The light reflecting from the glass panes
As the fan swings and the air blows, my heart is trying hard to flow
The evergreen leaves of the tree, so far away from the window is inviting with strange, enchanting desire
Our inner feelings, written not on paper but on the desk
So many people, yet no one knows what is in the mind of others
A window to see or to be seen
These windows describe my heart, another world separated from the environment
The grills outside the windows reminding me of my caged dreams, hopes my trapped soul
Was leviathan on the board or within us?
This pen has become my weapon.
