BRIEF INFORMATION ABOUT THE ACTIVITY

TOPIC/SUBJECT OF THE ACTIVITY	Seminar on Women in STEM (How to make the STEM space safer for women, what is the role of youth)
OBJECTIVES	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) To discuss the history of STEM fields, including the politics of gendered spaces, 2) To discuss how we can make STEM spaces more inclusive by incorporating interdisciplinary. 3) An initiative to promote gender equality on the occasion of Womens' Equality Day.
METHODOLOGY	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Conducting a seminar on the topic Women in STEM where an expert speaker accentuated the importance of women in STEM. 2) The speaker being principal scientist in TCS shed light on the topic.

	3) An interactive q&a to address the questions of attendees by the speaker.
INVITED SPEAKERS WITH AFFILIATION DETAILS (IF ANY)	Dr. Binuja Varma
OUTCOMES	Through the speaker session, the audience developed an understanding of the trajectory of Women in STEM fields, the intricacies of the field, the discourses, and the issues that usually do not come to light through everyday discussions. There was a lot of audience interaction, which showed that the audience took an active interest in the seminar and had something to take away. There were intense discussions and conversations that introduced new streams of thought while discussing aspects that have already existed, making the seminar a delightfully enriching one.

REPORT

WOMEN IN STEM- Even in the 21st century, this phrase still raises eyebrows. Women are still considered less competent than men with respect to men, even though they are slowly flooding the field. In this context, the session was organized by project Astitva of NSS to gain crucial insights on the topic through a speaker session by Dr. Binuja Varma.

The session explored the various stereotypes and expectations in the field, including how women and men doing the same work are viewed differently, and how women's work is yet to be accorded equal recognition. The session also spoke about how societal attitudes shape women's idea of working in the STEM field, and how it is important to make STEM spaces more safe, inclusive and interdisciplinary- which would only be possible by incorporating Humanities in STEM- by transforming it to STEAM. Overall, the session left the audience with a lot of food for thought, and a better idea of the STEM field as a workplace than before.
