REPORT

The Department of History in Collaboration with the Department of Sociology and Women's Development Cell at Sri Venkateswara College organised an International Conference on 'Rethinking Social Categories'. The event was held on 30th April, 2024, Tuesday. The conference provided a platform for insightful discussions and critical reflections on the conceptualization of social categories. It aimed to explore the dynamic nature of social categories and their construction within the realms of power, lived experience, and marginality.

The conference commenced with an introduction and welcome address by Dr. Padma Priyadarshini, setting the tone for the day's deliberations. The morning session, chaired by Prof. Rina Ramdev from the Department of English, focused on 'Gender, Sexuality and the Politics of Emancipation.' Dr. Dhiren Borisa from Jindal Global University, Dr. Dhruvo Jyoti from Hindustan Times, and Dr. Akshay Khanna, an independent scholar, presented thought-provoking insights on the socially and biologically constructed nature of gender and sexuality. They emphasized the intersections of caste and gender within the realm of queerness, highlighting the need to rethink social categories to address issues of homophobia and discrimination.

Following a refreshing tea break, the post-tea session delved into 'New Readings in Work and Labour,' chaired by Dr. Praveen Verma from the Department of History. Dr. Prabhat Kumar from the Centre for the Studies of Developing Societies (CSDS), Prof. Sumeet Mahskar from Jindal Global University, and Dr. Neha Wadhawan from the International Labour Organization (ILO) shed light on the historical and contemporary dimensions of labour and work. Discussions revolved around the social locations of Indian historians, the plight of servants, and the experiences of women in the informal sector. Participants underscored the importance of recognizing and addressing severe forms of discrimination within labour practices.

The post-lunch session, themed 'Environment and Development: Politics of Inclusion and Exclusion,' was chaired by Dr. Urmi Bhattacharya from the Department of Sociology. Dr. Megnaa Mehta from University College London (UCL) and Prof. Sudha Vasana from the Department of Sociology, Delhi School of Economics, provided insightful analyses of the ecological crisis and climate change. They highlighted the misinterpretation of climate change data, inequalities in climate governance, and the need for a healing mechanism to address the metabolic shift caused by capitalism. Participants engaged in discussions on elite environmentalism, greenwashing, and the urgency of environmental justice in tackling global crises.

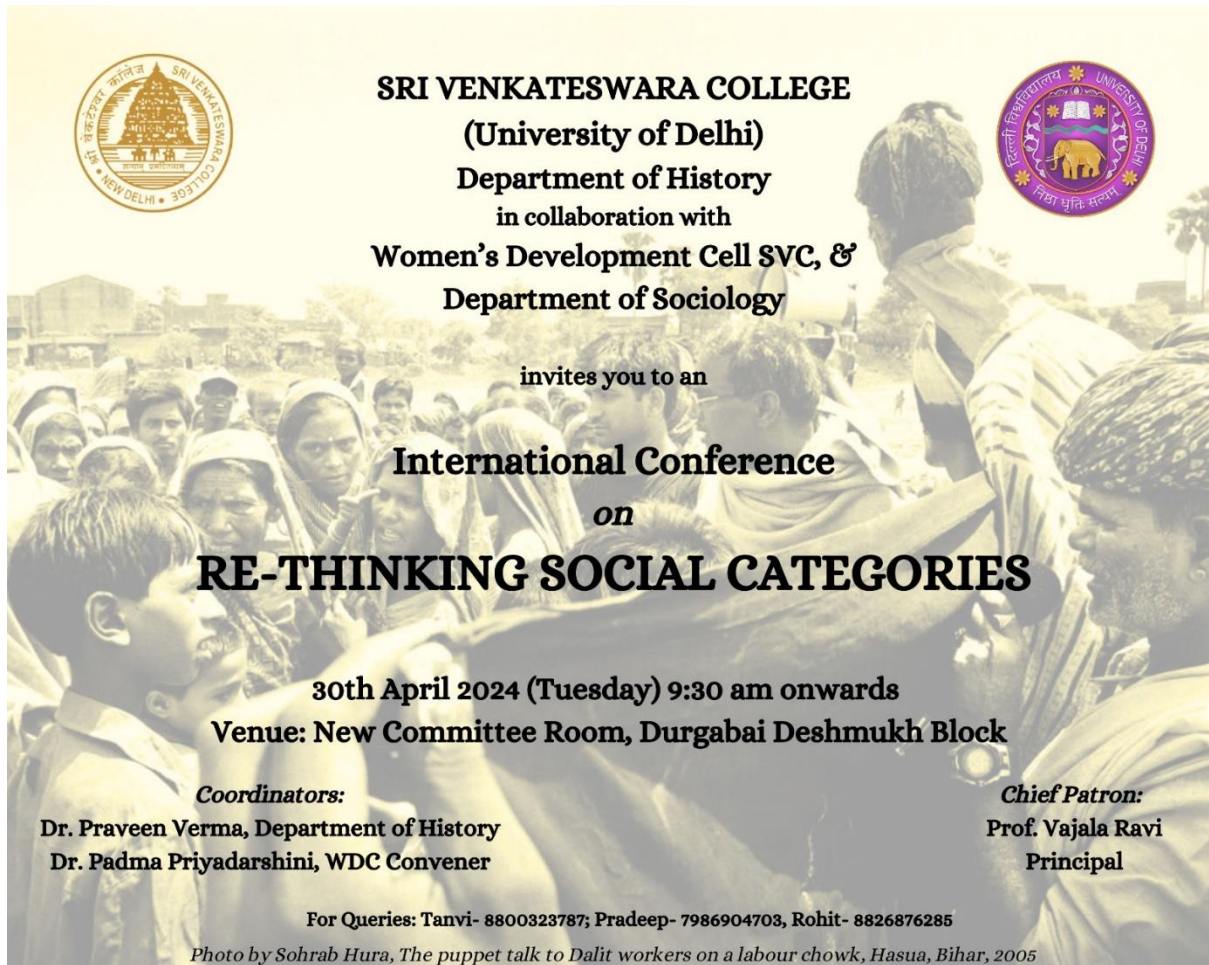

Throughout the conference, participants emphasized the importance of intersectionality in understanding social categories and addressing issues of discrimination and privilege. The conference provided a platform for interdisciplinary dialogue, bringing together experts from academia, media, and activism to reflect on the fluidities and complexities of social categories.

In conclusion, the International Conference on 'Rethinking Social Categories' facilitated meaningful discussions on the origins, meanings, and implications of social categories in contemporary society. It underscored the need for critical engagement and re-examination of existing frameworks to promote social justice and equality. The conference served as a catalyst for future research and activism aimed at challenging rigid boundaries and fostering inclusive societies.

Overall, the conference was a resounding success, thanks to the contributions of the volunteers, speakers, and participants, who collectively enriched the discourse on rethinking social categories in the modern world.
