BRIEF INFORMATION ABOUT THE ACTIVITY

TOPIC/SUBJECT OF THE ACTIVITY	The seminar focused on Gender, Imperial Frontier and the Second World War in the Naga Hills, Manipur. The lecture explored the historical experiences of local communities in Northeast India during World War II, particularly examining the gendered dimensions of war and the impact of military conflict on frontier societies.
OBJECTIVES	• To explore the historical experiences of communities in the Naga Hills and Manipur during World War II. • To analyze the role of imperial frontiers as strategic spaces during wartime. • To understand how local communities, especially women, experienced and navigated the pressures of competing military forces. • To highlight the importance of combining archival research with oral history in reconstructing complex historical narratives.

METHODOLOGY	• The seminar commenced with the introduction and felicitation of the invited speaker, Dr. Kimura Makiko, by the Teacher-in-Charge, Dr. Ningmuan Ching. • This was followed by the keynote lecture delivered by Dr. Makiko on the theme “Gender, Imperial Frontier and the Second World War in the Naga Hills, Manipur.” • During the lecture, the speaker presented her research through a detailed discussion of archival records and oral testimonies from the Naga Hills and Manipur region. • Students and faculty members attended the session and actively listened to the lecture and presentation. • The event concluded with an interactive question-and-answer session where participants raised questions and engaged in discussion with the speaker.
INVITED SPEAKERS WITH AFFILIATION DETAILS (IF ANY)	Professor Kimura Makiko Department of International Cooperation and Multicultural Studies, College of Liberal Arts, Tsuda University, Tokyo
OUTCOMES	• The seminar provided students with deeper insights into the role of frontier regions in global conflicts such as World War II. • Participants gained an understanding of how local communities were affected by imperial military strategies. • The discussion highlighted the importance of gender perspectives in historical research. • Students were introduced to the value of combining archival sources with oral histories in historical methodology. • The interactive discussion encouraged critical thinking and engagement with themes of war, memory, and local agency in historical narratives.

The poster features a dark red background with a faint, stylized map of India. On the left, there is a black and white photograph of Dr. Kimura Makiko, a woman with short dark hair and glasses, wearing a light-colored shawl over a patterned sari. The text is arranged in a formal, academic layout. At the top, the college and department names are followed by the word 'presents'. The title of the event is in large, bold, white serif font. The speaker's name and affiliation are in a smaller white serif font. A biographical paragraph follows, detailing her education and professional experience. The location and date are indicated with a red location pin icon and a clock icon. At the bottom, the names of the convener and patron are listed.
