REPORT

The Seminar on "Parliament in Indian Polity" was marked by insightful discussions and valuable takeaways. The event commenced with a warm welcome by Vanisha, followed by Dr. Niharika Jaiswal, who introduced the esteemed speaker Dr. Rup Narayan Das, a Consulting Editor and Consulting Secretariat in the Lok Sabha. Dr. Das, a distinguished expert in the Indian Parliamentary system, shed light on the diverse career prospects in Indian politics and the various challenges within the system.

At the heart of the discussion was an exploration of the Indian Parliamentary system, which comprises of two houses—the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha. Dr. Das pointed out the complexities of Indian politics, particularly due to linguistic diversity and the socio-economic conditions of the country. He emphasized the challenges faced by marginalised communities, including tribal populations, children in remote areas, and those affected by gender and disability-based inequalities. Additionally, religious and caste-based discrimination further complicates access to democratic and parliamentary processes. These disparities highlight the urgent need for trained and aware leaders who can navigate these challenges and ensure equitable opportunities for all.

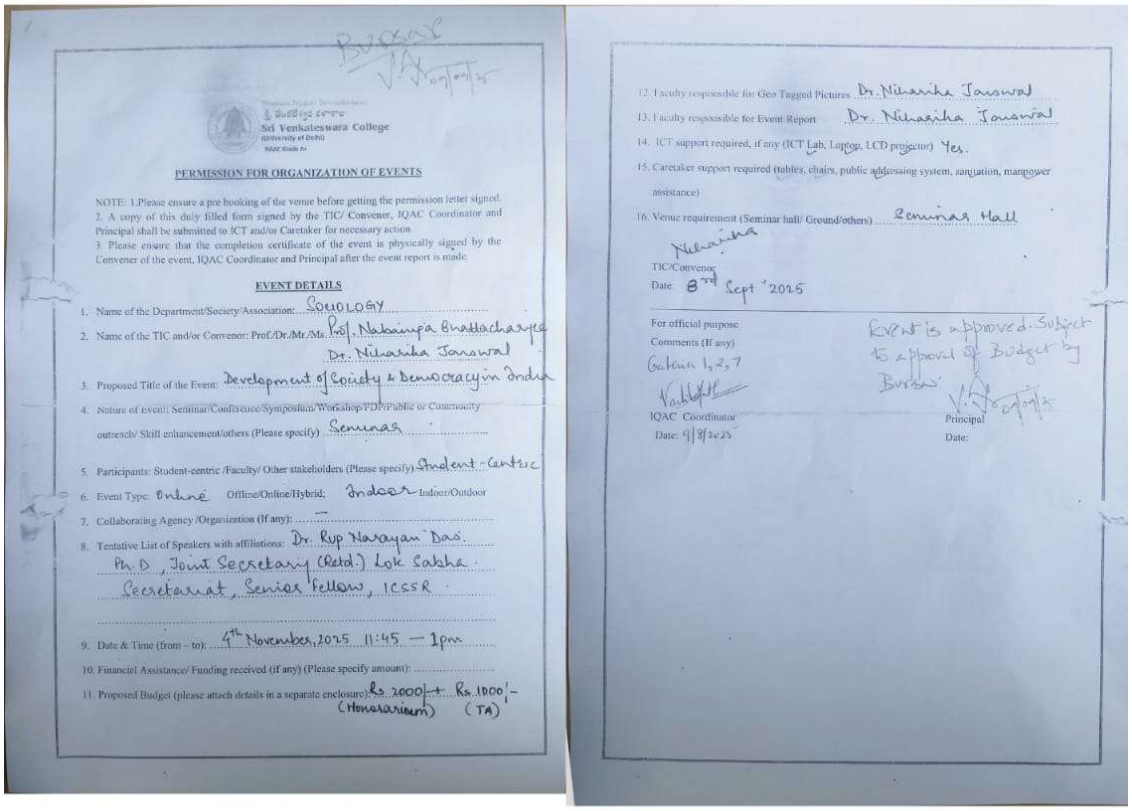

He further provided a brief overview of the two houses of Parliament and discussed various Articles of the Constitution that shape India's legal and judicial system. He spoke about Article 79, Article 245, Article 246, and elaborated on their purpose, functioning, and accountability. He introduced the different types of ministers, executives, and officers who help in the smooth functioning of Parliament. Dr. Das also gave insights into governance in the United Kingdom, explaining its influence on Indian law and administrative structure.

He discussed various bills such as Money Bills and the Aadhaar Bill, and expressed concern over rising money-laundering cases in India. He also explained the concept of a guillotine motion, the role of standing committees, and highlighted the declining participation of elected representatives in parliamentary debates. Additionally, he shed light on the role and powers of the Speaker, and how the office ensures the smooth and effective conduct of parliamentary sessions.

The conversation then shifted to the progress made in parliamentary functioning. Dr. Das discussed ongoing parliamentary reforms, improvements, and their impact on citizens. While significant improvements can be observed in overall participation and legislative initiatives, issues such as money-laundering, hidden discrimination, and socio-economic divides still persist. Gender and caste roles within the political system continue to shape political experiences, making it imperative to address systemic biases and create an inclusive parliamentary environment.

The session concluded with an engaging Q&A segment, where participants inquired about political career opportunities, the growing disconnect between citizens and Members of Parliament, and issues related to ministerial accountability. Students also raised questions about the changing trends in opposition politics and whether shifts in influence have affected parliamentary functioning. Dr. Das's insightful responses highlighted the vast career prospects in Indian politics and Parliament, emphasising the need for passionate and responsible leaders dedicated to shaping India's future. The session ended fruitfully with a vote of thanks delivered by Aditya Kaushal.
