REPORT

The Department of Sociology organized a General Body Meeting on 29th September,2026 from 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. in Room 302. It gave students and faculty members an opportunity to discuss academic and departmental concerns, share suggestions, and address issues related to the department's functioning. The meeting began with Dr. Niharika Jaiswal briefing the students about the purpose and importance of the General Body Meeting. She explained the proceedings and encouraged students to openly raise their questions, concerns, and suggestions.

Following the briefing, the floor was opened to the students. The first question was raised by Satwik, a second-year student, who requested a departmental trip outside Delhi. Thereafter, Sheetoshna, a third-year student, raised a concern regarding the departmental library and its use. In response, Dr. Padma Priyadarshini suggested appointing a library representative to coordinate library-related matters and communicate students' requirements to the department. Dr. Urmi Bhattacharyya further explained that if a book required by students was not available in the department library, they could communicate their needs to the department, which would make efforts to procure it. The discussion then moved towards student engagement and career guidance. Komal, a first-year student, suggested that the department could organize an alumni meet. She felt that interaction with alumni would help students gain guidance regarding higher education, career opportunities, and possible future paths.

Further, Dr. Priyadarshini invited students to raise any concerns related to attendance. Saanvi, a second-year student, raised the concern that attendance should not be directly associated with marks. She suggested that there should be a more flexible attendance system so that students could have the opportunity to participate in extracurricular and other activities outside regular classes. In response, Dr. Priyadarshini clarified that the attendance requirement was a university-level matter and could not be altered independently by professors. She added that students' concerns could be raised with higher authorities. Saanvi further raised concerns regarding the nature of Value Added Courses (VACs), Skill Enhancement Courses (SECs), and Ability Enhancement Courses (AECs). She pointed out that these courses are intended to enhance practical and applicable skills, but several of them are largely theory-oriented. She suggested that such courses should have a stronger practical component.

Lakshay, a second-year student, raised the issue of the accessibility of reading materials. He suggested that the course readings should also be made available in Hindi, wherever possible. He added that soft copies of the readings should be provided for easier access, as they would also benefit students with disabilities in the department. Prof. Nabanipa Bhattacharjee acknowledged the concern and decided to also involve the Equal Opportunity Cell (EOC) in the matter.

The discussion then moved towards the timetable and breaks between classes. Baajuriee, a first-year student, expressed concern that the timetable did not provide adequate break periods between classes. Prof. Bhattacharjee said that the timetable is set at the college level and explained that the department faces constraints due to the limited availability of classrooms, particularly as the batch size has increased. Adding to this, Dr. Priyadarshini clarified that the department has to complete seven papers within a limited time period, with approximately 35 classes required for each paper. She added that the number of classes and related academic requirements are fixed by the university. Aryan, a second-year student, sought clarification regarding the 66.67% attendance requirement. He asked whether the requirement is calculated collectively across all subjects or separately for each paper, and whether both tutorial and theory classes are included. Dr. Priyadarshini said that the attendance requirement is calculated separately for each paper. She further explained that the college's software system calculates the attendance accordingly. The issue of classroom size was also raised. Shivanshi, a second-year student, expressed concern that Room 212 is not spacious enough for conducting tutorial classes effectively. She pointed out that the limited space can make it difficult for students to participate comfortably during tutorials. Similarly, Jaskirat, a first-year student, raised a concern regarding Room 326, stating that it is also not spacious enough for classes to be conducted comfortably.

The discussion was further extended by Neel, a third-year student, who raised a concern regarding the availability of Discipline-Specific Electives (DSEs). He suggested that, for the sixth semester, the department could offer two DSEs, allowing students to choose according to their academic background. Neel also made a suggestion regarding the department's annual association fest, Conscience Collective. He asked whether the fest could be extended from its existing one-day format to a two-day event, with the first day focusing on academic activities and the second on cultural activities. He also expressed that greater involvement from students across the years could strengthen the event. Dr. Priyadarshini explained that extending the fest to two days would require substantial monetary sponsorship. She further stated that organizing a larger event would require greater networking and external support. Dr. Bhattacharyya added that it would also require active contribution and participation from students of the discipline.

Anish, a third-year student, further suggested contacting alumni associated with the Sociology Department to extend inclusivity. In response to this suggestion, Dr. Satheesh Perumalla emphasized budgetary considerations and the limited sponsorship opportunities currently available. Further, Dr. Jaiswal informed students about the upcoming Alumni Meet and alumni seminars, which are held for students to connect with alumni. Sheetoshna, a third-year student, suggested that the official LinkedIn page of the Department of Sociology be activated to extend the department's reach. Prof. Bhattacharjee resolved to raise this issue with ICT to obtain the institutional ID and start the procedure for creating a formal account. Neel, a third-year student, suggested a more active and academic presence on Instagram for the department. In response, Dr. Priyadarshini and Prof. Bhattacharjee advised students to exercise care while handling social media. They also discussed the decentralization of responsibility within the department association and other activities, such as sharing access to the Instagram page with the creative head, Rudrani.

Several other ideas were also highlighted. Akshat, a first-year student, suggested a documentary screening. Anish a third-year student, assured that a departmental movie screening could be included in the association's activities. Another topic was raised by Navya, a first-year student, regarding the attendance criterion for extracurricular activities. In response, Dr. Bhattacharyya advised students to maintain their attendance and not to rely completely upon society attendance and further highlighted the formal requirements and procedure for obtaining ECA attendance. Lastly, the concern about the departmental trip was addressed by the faculty. Dr. Priyadarshini highlighted the administrative and financial constraints of organizing a departmental trip, while stressing the importance of inclusivity within the department. Prof. Bhattacharjee supported her by raising issues such as the safety and accountability of students.

Finally, the General Body Meeting came to an end when Dr. Jaiswal thanked the students and faculty for the discussion. The meeting was successful as an occasion to build trust, transparency, and a sense of community in the department, and it served as a platform to engage with new ideas.

Summarize responses

The kind of interaction we had with the teachers sitting all together in the presence of all the students of the department and the discussion among all ....

Professors willingness to answer our demand in good way

Teachers were cooperative

That many students could bring up the issue of attendance

Everything

The open discussion between faculty members and students

Everything was okay

I liked the opportunity to interact with everyone, share ideas, and discuss important matters related to the department in an open and positive environment.

10. What aspects of the event could be improved?

8 responses

Summarize responses

Students participation could be encouraged and events like this could be conducted more on a regular basis

Budget increase

Bigger room for a large audience

If our issues would be solved more easily via such conversations

Size of the room was not enough to accommodate all the students

Could have discussed certain flaws that exist in the workings of both students and teachers (inter and intra) impeding the progress of department as a whole.

Not that I can think of

The event could be improved by managing the time more effectively and allowing more opportunities for students to share their opinions and participate in discussions.

11. Which topic or theme would you like to explore further in future events?

8 responses

Summarize responses

Themes like interaction among the students of the department and what should be done to apply this effectively

Anything interesting

Attendance relaxation

More on attendance

Career paths after ba socio

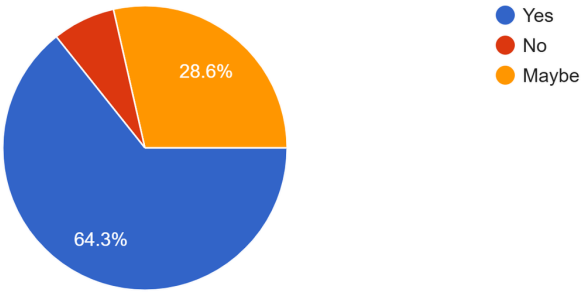

Moving beyond factionism and favouritism, and making peace with differences.

Not that I can think of

I would like to explore topics related to contemporary social issues, youth and society, gender equality, and the impact of social media on society.
